

GWEN KROSS
VICE PRESIDENT OF OPERATIONS, ALL OUT AERIAL

Working on several projects at once has never been much of a challenge to Gwen. While only a junior in high school and working a part time job to help support the cost of lessons, she began flying small planes at Lansing Municipal Airport, just south of Chicago.

“As much as they didn’t like the idea, my parents were always very supportive and they knew it was important to me. I loved it,” said Kross.

For many years, while the pursuit of a career in aviation always remained the ultimate goal, she took positions in accounting firms in Chicago while raising her son. As time passed and the desire to fly never waned she made the decision to go back to school and chose Purdue University’s Aviation Technology program. Attending on a part time basis while holding a full time job and raising a ten-year-old boy could only prepare her for what was to come.

After relocating to Phoenix she took several positions to establish herself in the aviation community during which she stumbled across aerial photography. Unlike many careers in aviation this path allows her to continue growing her passion for flight and balance a fulfilling home life.

“We are building a dynamic company and I am able to be in a position to fly for both business and pleasure. I am very happy with how everything is developing and the amount of time I am able to spend in the air!!

To learn more about ALLOUT AERIAL visit. www.alloutaerial.com